Leading with the Heart of God

In God's Kingdom, leadership isn't about position, it's about posture. It's not about how many people answer to you, but how many hearts you lift. As a boss, you're not just managing systems or profits, you are shepherding lives. Every decision you make, every word you speak, carries weight in Heaven's eyes. Jesus, the ultimate Leader, knelt down to wash the feet of those He led. He didn't need a title to influence. He used a towel. And so must we.

Authority, when yielded to God, becomes a holy tool to build others up. You were not placed where you are by accident; it was by divine appointment. Your leadership role is a pulpit, your character the sermon. What do your employees or colleagues learn about Christ from how you lead? Do they see patience in your correction, compassion in your counsel, and grace in your strength?

You are a steward, not just a boss. Steward of time, talents, and most importantly, people.

Lead them like a shepherd, not a taskmaster. Be strong, but be tender. Correct when needed, but never forget to encourage. People rise where they feel seen. When your team sees you pray, sees you serve, sees you forgive, they encounter God in you. You may be the only Bible some of them ever read.

Seek the Holy Spirit as your daily consultant. Invite Him into your calendar, your boardroom, your decision-making. He gives more than strategy. He gives discernment, peace, and power. Don't lead alone. God never meant for you to carry the burden without Him. And when the pressure comes (and it will), fall back—not into stress, but into grace. He's not looking for flawless leaders, just faithful ones.
