Promotion Comes from God

Everyone wants to rise. It's natural. We desire recognition, reward, responsibility. But in the Kingdom, promotion isn't a ladder you climb but a platform God assigns.

Psalm 75:6-7 reminds us: "Promotion doesn't come from the east, west, or south. God is the judge. He puts down one and sets up another." Your future isn't determined by your boss or your performance reviews. It's in the hands of the One who sees your heart irrespective of what you think.

In my experience, I have seen people rise up because they were diligent and I have also seen people rise up because they just had robust charisma and were easily favored. I also witnessed some promotions that were implemented because of 'bottom prowess' but in all of these, one thing was evident to me, if it is your turn to move up, no one can stop it.

Be excellent not for applause but for His glory. Be diligent not for attention but as worship. Don't chase titles. Chase faithfulness. Your character in the shadows determines your capacity for elevation.

David was anointed king as a shepherd. Joseph ruled Egypt after years in prison. Esther saved a nation because she dared to speak. None of them hustled for power—they were positioned by God.

So work hard. Serve well. Stay humble. And trust God with your timing. If He has called you, no one can block what He has ordained.

Your worth is not in a title, but in your obedience. Promotion is not proof of God's love - your identity is. And even if the raise doesn't come, your reward is secure. Your impact eternal.

If you must move on to another job because of stagnation or because the environment does not cut it for you, move on with grace and do not leave disgruntled. You owe no one any explanation but God.

Rest in that truth. Keep sowing. Keep serving. The God who sees in secret rewards in ways that no man can match.
