When Longing Meets Faith

There are days when the ache is more than emotional, it's spiritual. You want to trust God, but the longing is loud. You believe He is good, but your heart quietly asks, "Why not me? Why not now?"

And yet, this is where real faith is formed....not just in celebration, but in tension. Hebrews 11:1 says, "Now faith is confidence in what we hope for and assurance about what we do not see." Faith doesn't mean the absence of longing. It means choosing to believe that God's love still holds you, even when He says, "Wait."

Let this tension drive you deeper, not distant. God is not offended by your longing. He formed your heart, including its desires. What He wants is to meet you there not with quick fixes, but with Himself. His comfort. His presence. His promise that He is with you in the waiting.

There's a kind of worship that rises from an aching heart that still says, "You are enough for me." That kind of surrender is sacred. That kind of trust shakes heaven.

So bring your longing to the Lord, not just for resolution, but for relationship. He is not intimidated by your need. He draws near to it. And as you lift it to Him in faith, He will fill it with something deeper than even your answered prayer: Himself.
